DIGITAL ARCHAEOLOGY OF HERITAGE BUILDINGS OF WEST AFRICA – Ghana 28 May 2017 – 1 July 2017

Objectives for Summer 2017: The field school is designed to attract North American, Ghanaian, and international undergraduate and graduate students in the humanities, social sciences, and engineering interested in acquiring a multidisciplinary advanced training on surveying, digital modeling and engineering evaluation for the study and conservation of heritage masonry buildings of West Africa. The study will focus on the Elmina Castle, the most prominent of the UNESCO World Heritage monuments of Ghana. The school will be open to heritage professionals. The objective is to introduce the students to the principles of engineering structural diagnostics of heritage masonry buildings with the aim to produce a systematic survey (manual, photogrammetric, laser scanning) of select areas of Elmina Castle and related digital reconstructions. The school will also foster the understanding of the historical environment, and in particular the pivotal role in the Transatlantic World, of Elmina Castle through study visits to other forts and castles in coastal Ghana. In addition, the school will offer a broader view of the country's natural and cultural heritage through guided visits to selected archaeological sites and national parks. There are no pre-requisites.

What is included: The $4,950 program fee includes the UR tuition for 6 credit hours plus all lodging, meals, local transportation, and fees to parks and museums in Ghana. Airfare to Ghana, required vaccinations, entry visa to Ghana, and personal expenditures are not included.

Travel grant: All students will be eligible to apply for a $500 travel grant to offset the cost of airfare.

Interested UR students: This is a small program, open to all UR students, but with a limited number of participants. Interested students should contact Prof. Perucchio as soon as possible.
