Course Information:

Fall 2022

Tue. & Thurs. 16:50–18:05

Dewey 1101

This course examines the current war in Ukraine. This is a major war, with major implications for our lives and it is important for you to develop your own understanding of it in all its various aspects. Since this war is ongoing, readings are going to be very different from other courses. There will be links to tweets, twitter threads, blog posts, articles, YouTube lectures and any other useful sources. You are required to do all the reading. A lot of important background information you need to have will be provided in the lectures. This includes historical background about Ukraine, the end of the Cold War, the causes of war and the causes of war termination, why soldiers fight, on logistics, etc.. Attendance to lectures is therefore mandatory. If you miss these lectures you will not be able to do well on the exams. Of which there will be two, a mid-term and a final exam. Since the war is ongoing, the syllabus is likely to change during the semester, as developments on the battlefield, on the negotiation table, or the availability of new information warrants.

For this class I feel it is necessary to warn that some of the readings will directly confront you with the horrors of war. And they are truly horrors. There is just no way around this, if we want to even begin to understand war. There will be some readings with images that you may want to skip, I fully understand that, and I will try to warn you beforehand.

Academic Integrity

Be familiar with the University's policies on academic integrity and disciplinary action (<http://www.rochester.edu/living/urhere/handbook/discipline2.html#XII>). Violators of University regulations on academic integrity will be dealt with severely, which means that your grade will suffer, and I will forward your case to the Chair of the College Board on Academic Honesty.

18. The soldier’s perspective

Memoir of Russian soldier Pavel Filatyev. The full memoir – 144 pages – is in the readings folder, it’s entitled “ZOV.” I selected some memorable quotes, to begin with:

I don’t know how, but I wanted all those responsible for the fuck-ups and messes in our army to be to be punished. I wasn’t scared to die, I was offended to give up my life so ridiculously, I was hurt for all those who had given their lives and health for what, for whom?

- The first part of Filatyev’s story, covering the six months he spent in training with the 56th Guards Air Assault Regiment in Crimea before the war, see https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1560022545356791810.

- The second part, covering the period immediately before and after the invasion was launched on 24 February, is here:
https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1560355153441705984.
- For the third part, highlighting the haphazard and disorganised Russian takeover of Kherson in the face of even less well organised Ukrainian resistance, see https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1560725596765913089.
- The fourth part deals with Filatyev's experiences of the start of the occupation of Kherson and Russia's disastrous attempt to take Mykolaiv and Odesa:
https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1561024849245573123.
- The fifth part, Filatyev is injured, withdrawn from the front and reflects on the war.

it was at that point that I finally relaxed and thought about the last two months of my life, what it was all about, why I needed it, whether I'd done something good or bad, why I was part of it and how and why I was there in the first place.

https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1561411957340659713.

- The final instalment highlights Filatyev's detailed comments on the Russian military system, which provide an interesting insider's view of what's gone wrong with the Russian army and has led to its catastrophically poor performance in the war.

The system doesn't let the most promising, strongest and the smartest advance, but [prefers] those who can adapt to it, the higher up you go, the more you have to get dirty.

In all my time in the war I can't remember officers going to the trouble of leading soldiers, many getting drunk and sitting in normal fortifications while all the crap is done by regular contract soldiers.

https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1561785870163787780.

Another account from Daniil Frokin, a different Russian soldier. He too expressed confusion about the war's purpose:

I don't know who we're fighting against. Maybe we're fighting against the Armed Forces of Ukraine. But the AFU are not Nazis.

- https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1562874112707801088. Make sure you read #35.
- https://twitter.com/Chris0\_wiki/status/1563038520821702656. Note this point about the officers, and their leadership:

So, he, the District Commander and the Army Commander were given rifles and the infantry was told: 'These men will go first and you are to follow.' And that's when [Omurbekov] was wounded.

Living conditions of officers! Lieutenant Pavel Petrakov, member of the elite Military Space Academy:

- <https://twitter.com/i/status/1565080986177732608>

Here's a Radio Liberty interview with Pyotr Danilov, a former sergeant of the 64th motorized rifle brigade from Khabarovsk. This is the unit that is accused of war crimes in Bucha:

- <https://www.svoboda.org/a/tupo-net-sil-nastupatj-intervjyu-s-byvshim-voennym-iz-64-y-brigady/32006060.html>

Another very important issue for individual soldiers is of course medical care after they get wounded. Tanisha Fazal has a terrific article on this:

Questions to consider in formulating and evaluating social science research

1. What is the central question?
  - Why is it important (theoretically, substantively)?
  - What is being explained (what is the dependent variable and how does it vary)?
  - How does this phenomenon present a puzzle?
2. What is the central answer?
  - What is doing the explaining (what are the independent variables and how do they vary)?
  - What are the hypotheses, i.e., what is the relationship between independent and dependent variables, what kind of change in the independent variable causes what kind of change in the dependent variable?
  - What are the causal mechanisms, i.e., why are the independent and dependent variables so related?
  - How do the independent variables relate to each other?
  - What assumptions does your theory make?
  - Is the theory falsifiable in concept?
  - What does this explanation add to our understanding of the question?
3. What are the possible alternative explanations?
  - What assumptions are you making about the direction of causality?
  - What other explanations might there be for the phenomenon of study, and to what degree do they conflict with the central answer?
  - Could the hypothesized relationships have occurred by chance?
4. Why are the possible alternative explanations wrong?
  - What is the logical structure of the alternative explanations (compare 2)?
  - What is the empirical evidence?
5. What is the relationship between the theory and the evidence?
  - What does the research design allow to vary, i.e., in this design are the explanations variables or constants?
  - What does your research design hold constant, i.e., does it help to rule out the alternative competing explanations?
  - How are the theoretical constructs represented empirically, i.e., how do you know it when you see it (measurement)?
6. How do the empirical conclusions relate to the theory?
  - How confident are you about the theory in light of the evidence?
  - How widely do the conclusions generalize, i.e., what might be the limitations of the study?
  - What does the provisionally accepted or revised theory say about questions of broader importance?
