Learning Objectives

Participants will be able to...

- Planning your Grade Center
- Set up a New Columns
- Create and Set Categories
- Review your Grade Center Points
- Review and Reorganize your Grade Center Columns
- Setup a Smart View
- How to Use Rubrics
- Understand what a Student Sees – My Grades

PLANNING

Planning your Grade Center

- Acknowledge that grading can be unique, and one model might not fit every course
- What is your grading policy?
 - 1 - What are all of the assignments and assessments worth in your course?
 - 2 - Based on how students perform on those, what grade will they earn.

Planning your Grade Center

Grading Policy

Students will be evaluated through the following activities.

Participation in class discussion & activities - 25%

Each module will have a discussion section in which we will share ideas and ask questions to better understand the topic and readings under study. Each class member is expected to participate in these discussions by posting an initial response based on the course readings and subsequently replying to the posts of classmates in order to engage in meaningful discourse. Your MINIMUM participation is three posts per module (one initial post and at least two responses to classmates' posts). I anticipate that you will be compelled to respond much more frequently than this. In addition, your postings to the discussion should be contributed over the duration of the module, not within the same brief session, to receive the maximum score. Your initial post should be within the first two days of the opening of the module and your responses to classmates should be within the first week.

Module quizzes - 10%

At the end of each module (except Module 5), you will take a quiz (2 points each) on the course readings. These quizzes will help you to organize and formalize your understandings of the readings.

Experimenting with Web 2.0 Tools - 15%

Final Project - Building your online course - 40% (comprised of several assignments)

Personal Reflection Journals - 10%

In each Module, you will reflect on the module readings, the class discussion, and your personal construction of knowledge from the learning activities. You will write a concise summary of your reflections in a journal at the end of every module. This should be no more than 2 paragraphs and submitted on the last day of the module.

And the grade distribution for this course is as follows:

94 and above= A

90-93 = A-

85-89 = B+

80-84 = B

69-79 = C

Less than 69 = E

[Students on Pass/Fail must achieve a 70 or higher.]

All work should be submitted on time ... points will be deducted for work handed in late.

Instructor Response and Feedback

Students should expect to receive feedback on their assignment grades within one week after the due date.

Planning your Grade Center

- Benefits to the faculty member
 - Efficiency
 - Use this as the vehicle to collect and review all assignments and assessments
 - This can include other elements – attendance/participation or activities with tools outside of Blackboard
 - Provide and share feedback to your students
 - All of this is retained and archived in your course
 - Saving time at the end of the semester for final grading – let the grade center calculate the totals

Planning your Grade Center

- Benefits to the student
 - Ability to monitor their work and progress
 - Through MY GRADES - Students can see all assignments and assessments
 - Students can have access to rubrics if available
 - They can track and confirm what they have submitted
 - They can see their score and feedback
 - They can see their running total for the course

Assignment Rubrics

Create Rubric

Rubrics are made up of rows and columns. The rows correspond to the various criteria of an assignment. The columns correspond to the level of achievement expressed for each criterion. A description and point value for each cell in the rubric define the evaluation and score of an assignment. You can create as many rubrics as needed. More Help
